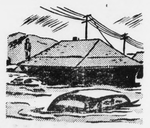
The Red Cross Needs YOUR Help Now

. . . when will you need the RED CROSS?



THE WIDE and far-reaching services of the Red Cross in wartime need no recounting. Nor do we need reminding of the million tasks so cheerfully undertaken for our veterans, and the quick, ever-ready aid in time of disaster.
But NOW, in addition to serving our expanding Armed Forces and continuing its normal day-to-day community activities, your Red Cross is mobilizing for defense:
Training 20 million Americans in First Aid (including treatment after atom-bomb attack)
Training 1 million women in home care of the sick
Training at least 100 thousand volunteer nurses' aides for emergencies
Your Red Cross needs YOU now . . . who knows when you will need your RED CROSS? Give generously!
